Five top tips from Podiatrist, Emma Supple:

- one Avoid open backed or thin soled shoes if you are susceptible to dry and cracked heels.
- two Scrub feet thoroughly on a daily basis, to ensure they are clean. Then moisturise feet on a regular basis with a urea based product.
- three Keep an eye on foot health, especially if you're diabetic, and don't wait too long before seeking professional help if necessary.
- four Toenails should be cut straight across using toenail clippers. Avoid using scissors as you are more likely to cut unevenly or too low.
- five Don't wear shoes which are uncomfortable or slightly too small. They may look nice, but won't do your feet any favours in the long run!

Dry and cracked heels are commonly caused by a loss of 'elasticity' in the skin when dryness sets in, or when the skin thickens and cracks or breaks under pressure, which can occur through everyday activities such as walking and exercise.

The best treatment is one that contains urea, which is a moisturiser produced naturally by our skin, such as Flexitol Heel Balm. It contains 25% urea and is medically proven to hydrate dry, cracked heels.

Top tips for tip top feet

Consider these three things over the coming months, so your feet are ready for anything — remember just think SASSy!

SCRUB — Scrub your feet daily with a bristle brush to remove any dead skin and dirt.

APPLY — A urea based moisturising product such as Flexitol Heel Balm, for healthier, softer and smoother, well-nourished skin.

SHOE SAVVY — Ensure you have sensible footwear; man-made materials can be great but, where appropriate, leather is best, as it is breathable and moulds well to the feet.
